FORGIVENESS

What is it?

1 Cor 10:12, 1 John 1:9, Psalm 9.

God comes to us – love, support, through our friends and family too.

There is forgiveness, but there is also consequences for actions.
How do you begin that kind of transformation? You can't manage it on your own. You need God's power and forgiveness. And where do you find that? You ask for it. You ask, admitting your need. And God goes to work in your life. So when you've stopped having sex or taking illegal drugs and asked for forgiveness, can you call yourself a virgin, or a new person? Perhaps you are no longer a virgin, or a non-user in the physical sense. But because you have been purified by God, you are a virgin or person with a new start in his eyes. That may not clear up your reputation or your memory. But it does clear up your future with God.

Once you've experienced God's forgiveness, you'll still have to deal with the leftovers of your past, like guilt. Feelings of guilt are your internal, emotional response. They aren't always reliable. What we call a guilty conscience is often a mixture of feelings like regret, loss, sadness and shame. These are natural feelings for someone who's been involved in a sexual relationship. The sense of guilt won't instantly change. Like other natural consequences—pregnancy, disease, or painful memories—feelings don't necessarily disappear when God transforms your life. But their sting is taken away. So, even though you may still feel guilty, it's vital to know that, as far as God is concerned, you're not guilty. That's the truth of 1 John 1:9, where God promises to forgive us and cleanse us when we confess our sins to him.
