Suicide

Children’s Book Council of Australia Awards

- Why are some of the books unsuitable for young children?
  In the Awards Handbook, you will see that the PB and EP books may be for any age up to 18. For this reason the CBCA indicates on its official lists that ‘some of these books may be for mature readers’. Each of these categories will contain a range of books, suitable for different audiences, and so will need to be assessed for purchase on an individual basis.

- I think some of the books are too dark and depressing.
  Of course it is impossible to please everyone, but the judges take their responsibilities very seriously, and discuss the books at length – having read them all at least once. They must stick to the criteria, so that, for example, ‘suitable for a primary school class’ or ‘let’s balance the list as too many have historical settings’ are not permitted as arguments. In the end the choices made are those of a particular group of judges at a particular time. The full Judges’ Report is published annually in the August issue of Reading Time.

- I still worry about some of the themes.
  We live in a less than perfect world, and authors, illustrators and publishers are perhaps reflecting our society. Children are bombarded with news and information, not to mention advertising and TV programs. Books provide a means of generating thoughtful discussions about issues and fears. They can be shared with a trusted adult, read at the child’s own pace, and disturbing pages can be skipped. Reading is a very different experience to that of being exposed to images and information over which one can have little or no control. Books can be put aside or reread whenever the reader chooses to do so. It is individual buyer's responsibility to determine if a title is suitable for their particular situation.
Hope

Interestingly, CBCA president Bennett admits this finalist is well outside her comfort zone. "We would have got a lot more flak had The Island won (the picture book category), rather than Requiem," she says candidly. Bennett feels the denouement of The Island, which has won literary awards in Europe, is too nihilistic for children, as it offers no hope or optimism. Criteria

Each text will:
• sustain intensive study, raise interesting issues, and provide challenging ideas;
• be appropriate for both male and female students;
• be appropriate for the age and development of students and, in that context, reflect current community standards and expectations.

The text list as a whole will:
• provide a range of forms and genres;
• be suitable for a wide range of students, including second language students;
• reflect the cultural diversity of the Australian community;
• include a balance of new and established works;
• include texts that display affirming perspectives.
A little girl asked her mother: 'How did the human race appear?' The mother answered, 'God made Adam and Eve; they had children; and so was all mankind made.'

Two days later the girl asked her father the same question. The father answered, 'Many years ago there were monkeys from which the human race evolved.'

The confused girl returned to her mother and said, 'Mum, how is it possible that you told me the human race was created by God, and Dad said they developed from monkeys?'

The mother answered, 'Well, Dear, it is very simple. I told you about my side of the family, and your father told you about his.'
“Among important unifying ideas and theories developed by biologists are the cell theory and the theory of evolution. It was a key discovery of the twentieth century that all life forms use the information carried by the DNA molecule to pass instructions from generation to generation.”

as well as…Technology!

- Radio has never been a threat (although some community radio stations are a bit on the edge)
- Television - movies and documentaries which have ratings
- Internet – a Pandora’s box of blogs, chat rooms, pornographic and violent sites
- Video and computer games
- Mp3 players with aggressive music with violent, sexual lyrics
As educators we need to ask ourselves...........

- How vigilant are parents in monitoring the hours spent by their children watching television, playing computer games, internet surfing, chatting and blogging? How many hours are spent texting and talking to friends on the mobile phone? Should schools be worried?
- In this information rich age should staff in secondary schools be actively censoring as much as they can or should we be teaching our children to become selective, discerning adults as part of lifelong learning?
- If students are not challenged and do not discuss issues in a Christian environment/school how will they respond to life when they leave?
- A parent does have the right to withdraw their child from certain studies or film/theatre excursions but do they have the right to impose their values on the other students of that class or school?
Where do I find these Selection resources?

We would refer to the following publications to develop a broad understanding of the current Lutheran (L), National (N) and Teacher-librarian (T-L) focussed documentation.
