

Service learning in Lutheran schools

Lutheran Education Australia global partnerships

How can we as a Lutheran school community serve others?

Schools can serve others in the global family through supporting the work of Australian Lutheran World Service (ALWS) and the Board for Mission (BFM). These agencies provide the opportunity to uphold justice in the global community and to reach out to whole communities with the Christian faith through the provision and supporting of aid and community development.

Where in the world are Lutheran schools?

Australian Lutheran schools belong to a global family. Lutheran schools can be found in:

How can we connect with another Lutheran school?

Lutheran schools in Australia are a part of the international Lutheran school community. Developing partnerships with other Lutheran schools provides the following opportunities.

For students to:

- develop relationships with people of another culture
- learn about each other's lives, cultures and schooling
- consider the joys and challenges of growing up and learning in another context
- explore areas of mutual concern and develop strategies for action
- explore what it means to live as a Christian in another culture and nurture opportunities for students' own spiritual growth
